Personal Statement

I'm a wife, mom, professor and passionate family doc. I've been an active member of AAFP since 1993 and have served in a variety of membership and leadership roles in my state academy since that time. The letter from our Chapter Executive, Sam Blackstock, will detail my role with the Oklahoma Academy.

I work at the residency program of the University of Oklahoma Department of Family and Preventive Medicine where I serve as 10/14/2016

Medical Director of our clinic, which cares for more than 50,000 mostly Medicaid and Medicare patients per year. We have the highest acuity patient population in the state, and were recently awarded track 2 CPC+ status in addition to our status as a tier 3 PCMH. Prior to joining the university, I served a completely different population as a private practice doc for 7 years, and understand the challenges facing our colleagues in the community.

Among my greatest passions are mentorship and advocacy. In my role as faculty, I serve as advisor to our FMIG, helping students discover Family Medicine and develop into the best possible residency candidates. As advisor to our Families and Medicine interest group, I assist students in balancing work life with “real” life. As co-moderator of the Physician Moms in Family Medicine Facebook community, I facilitate discussions among more than 2,000 “sister docs,” encouraging them in overcoming challenges in work/life balance or negotiating their career paths, and connecting them to opportunities across the country. As an active member of the #FMRevolution, I help advocate for those priorities that all family docs share. As a member of NCSC/NCCL since 2010, I have helped our junior delegates develop resolutions which have become policy. Most notably, I was an editor and co-author of a recent resolution on differential policing as a social determinant of health, which found support at both the national congress of delegates and at the AMA.

(Include a personal statement expressing your interest, qualifications, and areas of expertise and practice)

NCCL (formerly NCSC) Involvement

I have attended NCSC/NCCL since 2010. I have served as Women’s Delegate from Oklahoma every year except the 2017 cycle, when I am expecting to serve as GLBT Ally unless our delegation changes. I have served on Reference Committees and as Co-Convener for the Women’s Delegation. During my year as Co-convener, my fellow Co-convener and I worked to enhance the cross-delegation collaboration during resolution writing sessions, which helped develop into the current practice of the delegations writing resolutions together in the cafe area. This has been by far my favorite change of the past 7 years, being given the opportunity to mingle with delegates of all constituencies, educate new delegates in researching, writing, editing and submitting resolutions, and getting to know people outside my delegation in the process!

(Constituency Represented)

(Roles & Responsibilities with Previous NCCL (formerly NCSC) Conferences)

Competencies & Skills

I serve as one of three elected members of the board of directors of OU Physicians, the largest physician group in Oklahoma, representing more than 800 providers (including around 680 physicians of all specialties). As medical director of the clinical practice, I oversee the care provided by 36 resident physicians, 18 faculty physicians and 3 non-physician providers to the population previously described. I have certification in LEAN/SIX Sigma, and in this capacity serve as an elected member of the task force currently working to integrate our clinical practice with another large practice group.

I speak in both educational and advocacy arenas: I am the online face of OU Medicine, and as such engage in media interviews more than 20 times per year. I’m also one of the physician liaisons for our practice, and as such develop educational videos for our intranet regarding EHR and other topics. As developer and director of our nationally-recognized chronic pain management curriculum, I’ve been invited to speak with the White House Director of National Drug Control Policy and with the U.S. Surgeon General regarding physician educators’ response to the opioid addiction crisis.

If elected, I would use my time as convener to develop new talent to replace me. I am in love with NCCL and all it represents, and hope I could help us weather a tough current climate to maintain excitement for the important advocacy work that we do.

(List organizational and leadership skills, public speaking experience, & other relevant skill sets)

Community & Chapter Involvement

I believe my Chapter Exec is providing the data. Please let me know if you need more than is available in his letter, my prior responses or on my CV. I do want to make it as easy as possible for you to have a complete picture of me as a candidate! Thanks so much for the opportunity.

Ms. Wymer,

On behalf of the Oklahoma Academy of Family Physicians, we are pleased to nominate Rachel Franklin, MD for the 2018 NCCL Convener for the American Academy of Family Physicians. We believe the AAFP would benefit from Dr. Franklin's openness, fairness, organization and deeply abiding dedication to our specialty.

Rachel has excelled in a variety of Academy leadership positions since her earliest days as a student member and is currently serving as co-chair of the OAFP Patient Advocacy Committee. As a longtime member of the OAFP Board of Directors, Dr. Franklin has served on a variety of committees and projects. She has been a tireless supporter of the Oklahoma Family Medicine Student Interest Group and has lead several students to the specialty of Family Medicine. She has been an active leader in the AAFP NCCL for many years and continues to recruit emerging Oklahoma leaders to the NCCL meeting. She can take credit for Oklahoma's long time "Full Delegation" Award from NCCL for the past several years.

The members of the Oklahoma Academy of Family Physicians believe that the commitment, knowledge, and experience of Rachel Franklin, MD have served our state chapter well and that she would bring these same traits to the role of Convener of the AAFP NCCL. We enthusiastically tender this nomination and are happy to provide any additional information you may require.

Sincerely,

Sam Blackstock
Executive Vice President

Personal Statement

My engagement with the AAFP at large began as an incoming chief resident. My program sent my co-chief and me to the AAFP's chief resident leadership development conference ... I went with no idea of what to expect. The second session of the meeting was held in conjunction with what was then called the Annual Scientific Assembly in Denver, CO. I was inspired and proud to count myself as a member among such a dynamic group. I wanted to be at the meeting every year, but I had no idea that there was more.

My involvement in the NCSC and now NCCL was serendipitous. In the summer of 2012, I opened my email to find a bulletin from my California AFP chapter detailing the success of the 2012 NCSC conference, and the election of one of my medical school classmates. Marie Ramas, to the position of co-convenor of the minority caucus. I didn't know what this conference was, but I consider Marie a peer, colleague and friend. If she was involved in something, I knew I probably wanted to get involved as well. I attended my first NCCL (then NCSC) in 2013 and have attended each year since, working with peers like Marie to move our specialty forward.

As my engagement with NCCL grew, I also became active with my local chapter. Working with four other local members (who would eventually be known as the executive committee) we transformed a largely dormant chapter to a vibrant one that holds regular CME-granted meetings and produces quarterly electronic chapter bulletins. My role in this rebirth was as principal organizer. I was officially the secretary of the chapter, contacting members, coordinating meetings in collaboration with state staff, and producing the minutes for each meeting. Now, looking back at the rebirth, I realize that behind the scenes I was the force to help our executive committee and members at-large bring their ideas to fruition.

This is the role I often play. My ability to inspire others to action helps me bring out the best in any team of which I'm a member. I choose to surround myself with smart and motivated colleagues who push me to be my best. To me, leadership is not about being the smartest person in the room, or the loudest. It is about being a collaborator and facilitator. My aim is to help people reach their potential individually and together as a group.

In 2016, I was elected as one of two co-conveners to the minority caucus. Quite unexpectedly, my co-convenor was called to serve in Afghanistan and was unable to work alongside me at NCCL. Suddenly there was no "co" in this co-convener. Wonderful family medicine friends and colleagues from across the country all offered to step in and help me lead my constituents, but ultimately, I handled the entire job on my own. My husband often makes fun of me for being too humble, but this is not one of those cases! I'm really proud of this past year: from posting updates to the listservs leading up to the conference, running the caucus, chairing the reference committee on Advocacy and then reporting on that reference committee to the entire body of NCCL, I have handled the roles and responsibilities meant for two with what I hoped was grace and a little humor. As an extension of the co-convener role, I also organized and ran the daily caucusing, meetings and report writing of the constituent delegates and alternate delegates at this year's AAFP Congress of Delegates, along with one other person. Organizing peers and running meetings is solidly in my skill set.

I want to serve as convener of NCCL because I know I can do a great job. And because I feel that it is time for me to make the next leadership leap. I am reliable, organized and passionate. I am inclusive and I bring people together. As a mother of teenagers, I always remember to have fun while getting the job done. I am inclusive and work to bring people together. I represent the best of what NCCL stands for, and in one person, embody three of the five constituencies, but also share roots, values and understanding with the other two that don't directly describe me. I believe I can represent us all and I can inspire and encourage us all.

Dear Ms. Wymer:

It is a pleasure to endorse the candidacy of Shani Muhammad, MD for 2018 National Caucus of Constituency Leaders (NCCL) Convener.

Shani has been an outstanding contributor to CAFP and, I believe, to NCCL, and her skill set is particularly well-suited to convener. She served as the “solo” convener of the Minority Caucus in 2016 when her “co” convener was called away to active duty in Afghanistan. Shani was an active member of the 2016 NCCL Congress of Delegates caucus.

Not only is Shani well-organized and highly conversant with parliamentary procedure, she truly is “congenial,” a consensus builder, as she says, who is open to the ideas of others. Shani is an excellent mentor and will be so not only to the Convener-Elect, but also especially to first-time attendees who can be overwhelmed by the process. She is an excellent communicator and speaker so will fill those roles very well when doing outreach to chapters. From one staff member to another, she is a dream to work with – highly responsive and reasonable.

Shani has been very active at CAFP, attending our All Member Advocacy Meeting, serving as a local chapter officer, and as a member of the 2016-17 CME Leaders Institute cohort. We have hopes that Shani will one day join the CAFP Board of Directors.

Stacy, it’s my pleasure to offer an unequivocal endorsement of Shani Muhammad for 2018 NCCL Convener. I’d be happy to answer any questions you might have.

Best,

Susan Hogeland, CAE
Executive Vice President
